Returning Home

When the days shall have come, and finally gone; when our ambitions and aspirations shall have materialized, or proved themselves to be vain; when a little, or perhaps even more than a little, of the glitter and gloss of an attractive future shall have worn away, then may this Book - our Book - yours and mine - by means of its associations serve as an incentive to renewed aspirations and endeavors centered in the will of Him whom we serve. This is our fondest desire for every member of our Alma Mater.

This year's theme....

This edition of the Nautilus is meant to symbolize a turning point in many different ways.

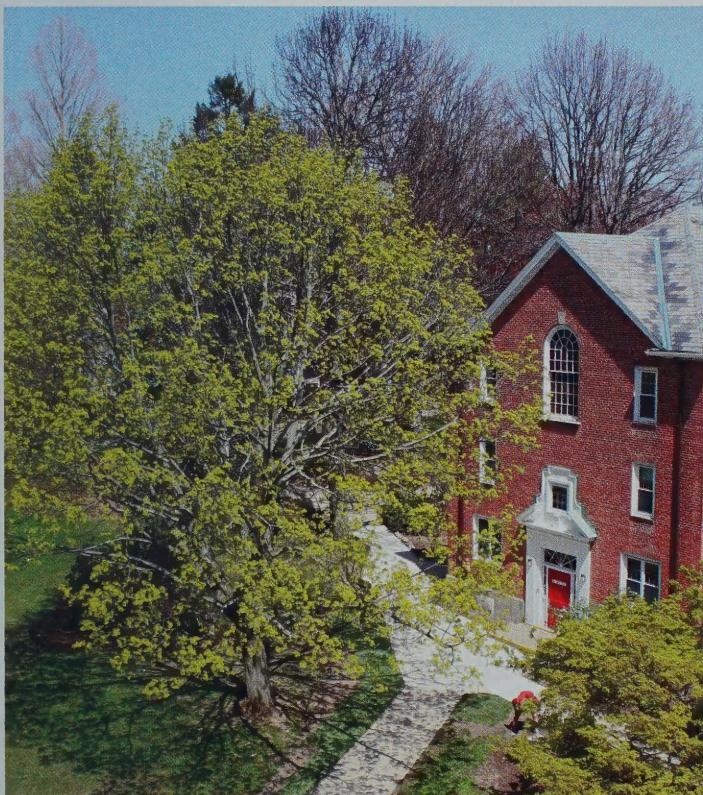

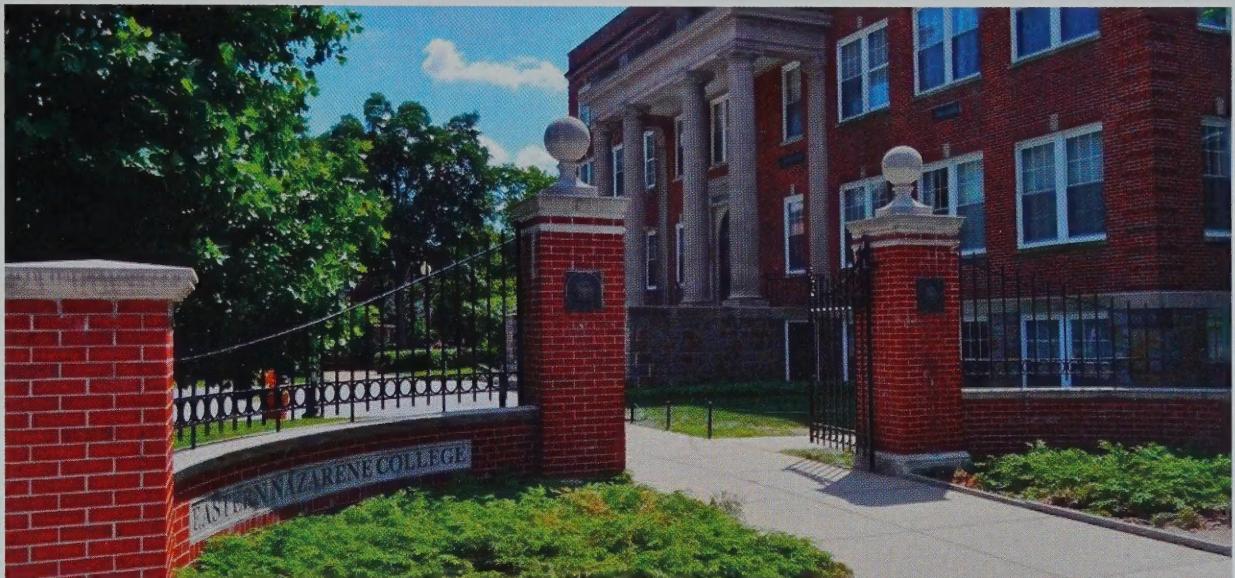

It's no secret that the Nautilus has struggled in the past, this year included. With this publication, we wanted to return to a more classic style of yearbook to symbolize how, through everything, both this publication and what it stands for is the same as always.

It's also no secret that ENC as an institution has struggled in recent years. Through all trials and tribulations, the ENC community's ability to remain strong and encouraged through hardships stands the testament of time.

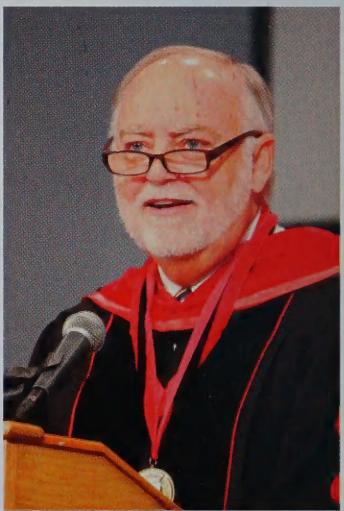

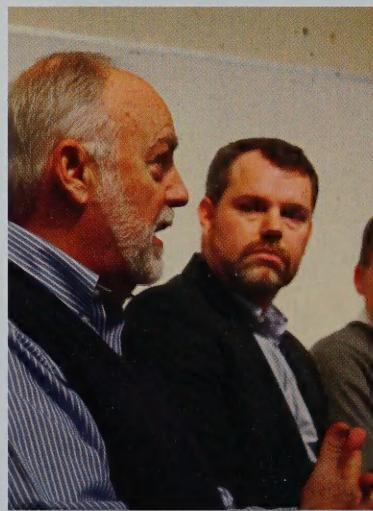

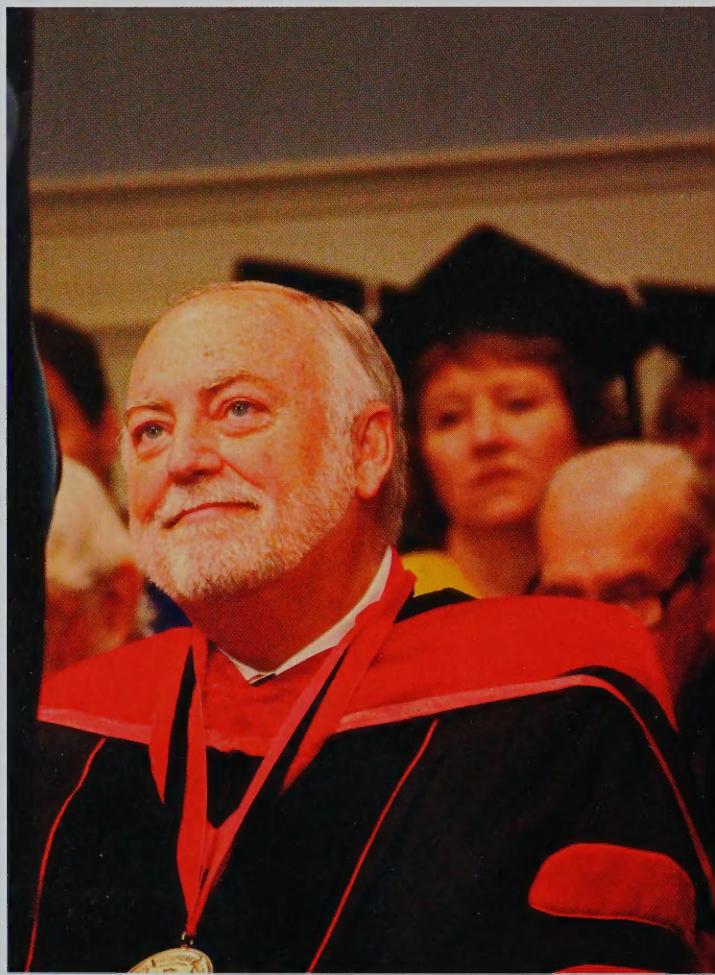

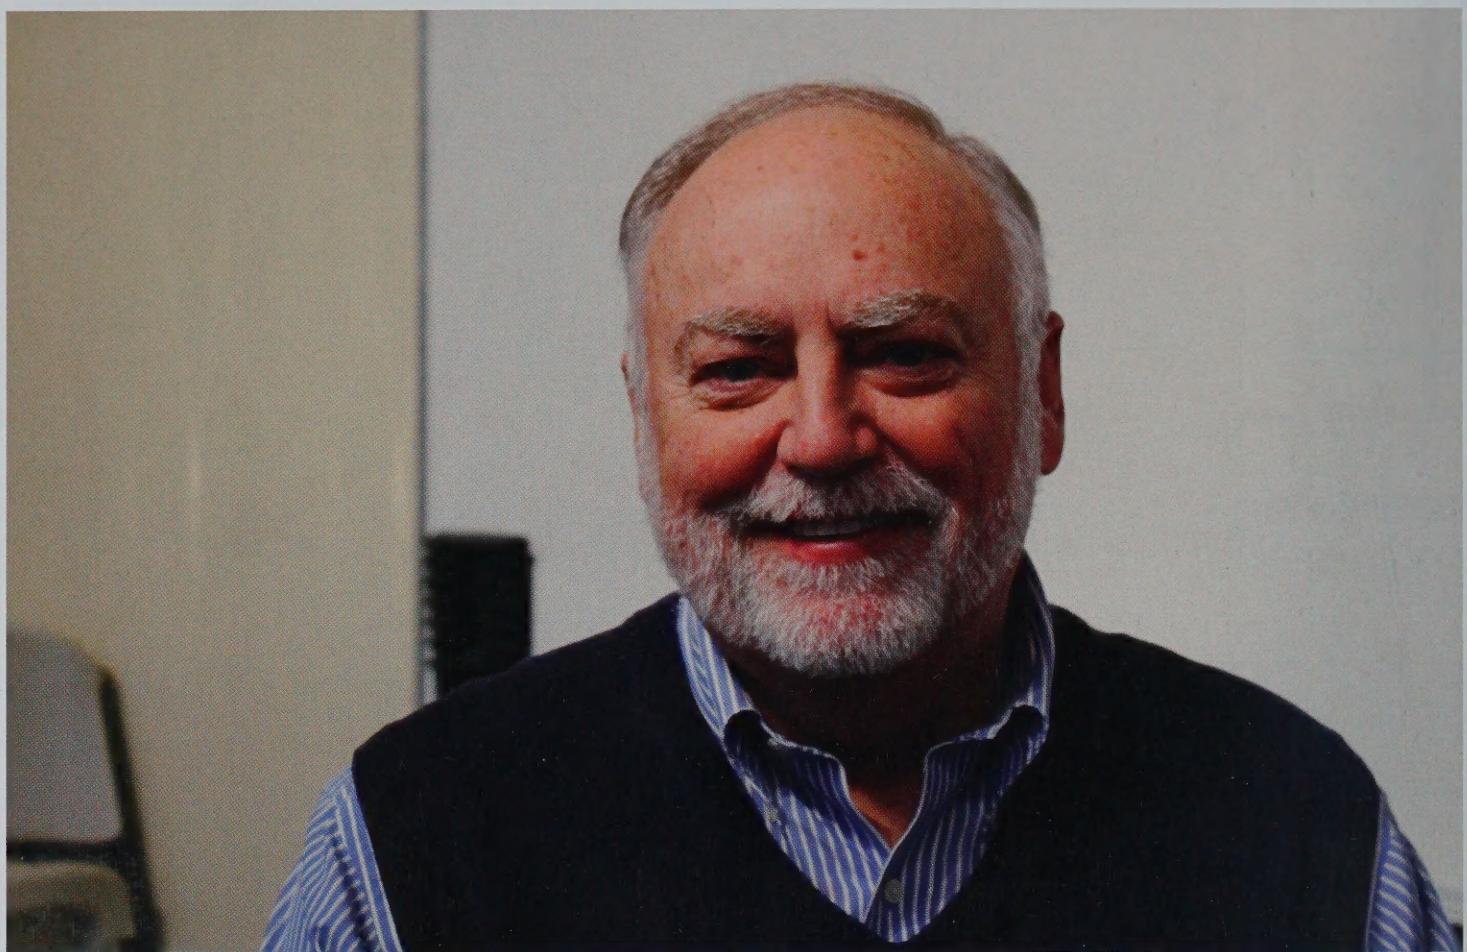

While, yes, this book is a turning point, it's also a reminder. A reminder that it's ok to look back, take certain aspects of the past and also leave others behind, all while looking to a stronger, brighter future.

And in that future, it's important to remember what's important and return home.

Returning Home

To our friends at ENC,

As history unfolds, I suppose it is quite unspectacular that someone served an institution for a year as its “President-elect”. There are people in this yearbook who have devoted most of their life to ENC. They are the heroes. But it has been my joy to join the community for this year.

And, I've learned a lot. The Clam Box is near and one person cannot consume their big order of fish and chips. Boston really does run on Dunkin. People do laundry in the Young Apartments all hours of the night. Foxes roam the campus and their kits are cute as a cat. The T is the way to get to Boston and back. Men are strong at ENC because of snow shoveling. Women are strong at ENC because of snow shoveling. Everybody is strong at ENC because of snow shoveling. Nor-easter is a bad word.

But I've also learned that people who care about a place can accomplish a lot in a short period of time, even if no one cares who gets the credit. And that the Church of the Nazarene was the first and strongest to the aid of her college. And that chapel music lifts your spirits. And that hard work has its reward. And that ENC students are my friends.

To those who are returning next year, take care of the place. You have something special.

To those who are leaving via graduation, may the Lord bless and keep you, make his face shine on you, be gracious to you, and grant you peace.

Blessings,
Dan Boone

A letter from Student Body President Key Bryant:

Dear Students,

Hey, it's me—Key! When I reflect on my experience from the 2017-18 academic year, I am reminded of the seemingly insignificant moments that have proven to be formative in how I have seen God move on our campus. It is in the beautiful faces that I pass by everyday that I feel love for this community. From the darkest shades of skin to the fairest, the Lord has provided sustainability in my college career through the lives and encounters I have had with my peers daily.

As Student Body President, I have served the ENC community in a way that has allowed me to love with a new set of eyes. This lens has enabled me to see students as something more than just young adults attending a small Christian liberal arts college together, but rather, an interconnected unit that has become a family whom I am not quite ready to give up on (maybe that's why I have an extra semester left). Our SGA mission and theme was birthed by this same idea—that we are not ready to give up on our identity as a family.

As our institution has faced (and is facing) a multitude of challenges and transitions, I felt that it was appropriate to expand on our mission and theme of OHANA by addressing it at SGA Chapel in the fall semester. I highlighted a vision of every student having a “seat at the table” regardless of worldly parameters that have been placed on one another. This notion, coupled with the chapel theme of the “Beloved Community,” has steered my attention toward aggressively pursuing the stories and hearts of the students on this campus. This, I believe, is the first step in truly living into a table that is inclusive of all races, all histories, all beliefs, and all orientations. 2 Corinthians 15:10 reads, “But by the grace of God, I am what I am.” Indeed, we are all imperfect and flawed college students who probably have no idea what is to come of our futures, but if we can learn how to accept what we are and love one another as the images of God in which we are created, then only beauty will transpire. Yes, there will continue to be struggles, doubts, and hardships, but do not lose sight of the meal that is being prepared for you at the table. It is for you. The seat is for you.

Seniors, be confident in the four years of experience that ENC has equipped you with. Trust the teachings and wisdom that have been poured into you by professors, faculty, staff, and of course your friends. And lastly, let the love of Christ control you. Yes, control you. Not in an enslaving way, but in a way that brings Him glory in everything that you do. Some of you will serve in different countries, some will marry and have kids, and some will go to graduate school. While our paths and callings may differ, there is one thing we share in common: we all have thousands of dollars worth of debt.

Congratulations!

With love,

Dedication

With our theme this year, we felt it was most appropriate to have a dual dedication to represent the Returning Home of both the Nautilus and ENC.

---

The first dedication is to all previous editors of the Nautilus. Not only did they pave the way for what the yearbook is today, but they were all a part in creating yearbooks that provided memories for so many students to return to. These editors provide inspiration for students past, present, and future.

---

The second dedication is to Jan Weisen, a man who, as part of the ENC community, is the perfect example of strength and courage. Through all hardships, Jan remained strong and dedicated, a great example to those at ENC and beyond.

ENC is grateful to have Jan Weisen as a part of our community and the Kirkseys are grateful to consider Uncle Jan and Aunt Sheryl part of the family we've formed in Quincy. Jan and Sheryl were among the first to welcome our young family into the ENC community and truly make us feel at home. They became our home away from family, our birthday and holiday meal go-to guests, and most certainly loving aunt and uncle figures to our growing brood of Kirksey kids. Though our kids are busy and boisterous, Jan and Sheryl always have time to get down on their level and engage them. They have loved our family and our family loves and cherishes them.

Anyone who knows Jan knows he's a straight shooter that shares his mind leading with an endearing "I think, I think..." He is also one of the hardest workers you will ever meet. Whether he was crunching numbers in finance, guiding a student through their student account, or shoveling snow with facilities, Jan approaches his work, and his calling, with gusto.

What folks may not have realized before last fall, is that Jan has also been battling cancer vigorously for the better part of 7 years. Through rounds of chemo, multiple lymphadenectomies, and a medical trial, Jan would faithfully be at work, church, and ball games deeply invested in the mission of the College. He didn't slow down or miss a beat until the Lord answered the community's prayers and provided a stem cell donor. Jan underwent a successful transplant and continued to serve the College from the confines of his home.

Last fall, Jan's body began to reject the transplant thus weakening his immune system. Jan's condition worsened rapidly leaving him in a subconscious state in the ICU at Brigham and Women's Hospital for weeks. It was in these dark days that we really witnessed what it means to live in community. While Sheryl spent her days with Jan, the ENC community saw that the fur-baby, Ruby, got lots of walks and her meals on time, that Jan's visiting family and Sheryl had hot meals and a full refrigerator, that lawns were mowed in the fall and walks shoveled in the winter. All of these were a blessing to see, but what most struck me was the army of prayer warriors from around the world that were interceding for Jan and Sheryl.

Our son Bennet, who has always had a fondness for his Uncle Jan, kept the Kirksey' accountable to be diligent in prayer. Every bedtime prayer he reminded us to "pray for Uncle Jan" and whether on foot or in the car when we passed Jan and Sheryl's home, Bennet would remind us again to "pray for Uncle Jan." Slowly the Lord answered those prayers and miraculously Jan returned home and of course to work.

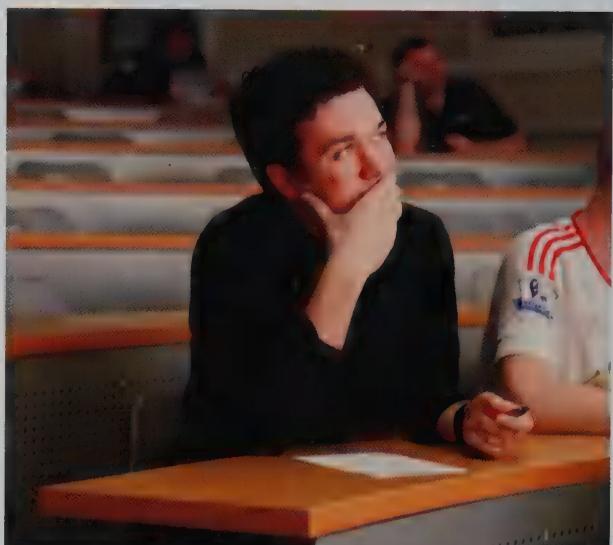

When Sarah and I think of Jan and Sheryl we pray that our kids will grow-up to be like them: warm, welcoming, invested, and intentional. In short we hope they will model Jesus like Jan and Sheryl have to us and many others. We rejoice that we get to celebrate Jan (and Sheryl) and revel in God's ministry to and through them.

Take it all in—it's hard to believe that four years ago, you were unpacking all your things trying to make your dorm feel like a home, not knowing how much you would change in the years to come. Freshman year was a transformative time; when you first got to campus, the only things on your mind were trying to make friends at the Back to School Bash, and the trip into Boston (so you would know some faces in your West in the World class). You're really the underdog. You aren't too sure about the flow of things, and you're still just trying to figure out what are you doing at this place, what your major's going to be, and who you want to become while here.

Sophomore year, you have a little bit more credit, your classes are getting smaller, some of your friends have left, but you're still on this great journey of trying to figure out college life and just staying calm until the next break. Classes are getting harder, but you are starting to see the potential in yourself and the major you chose, so you hold on for the ride that you know is coming. Junior year: one of the hardest years you had. Classes are no joke, the assignments feel never-ending, days don't have enough hours in them, but you are too close to give up!

And here we are: seniors. We did it. We've had our fair share of all-nighters, last minute assignments, speeches, and presentations, but we did it. During these four years, we have each had those moments where we think, "It's just not worth it. College is just too much. Time to pack it all up and head home." But we're better than that—we buckled down and got it done. With that being said, as you look back on your four years here, remember you can do anything. ENC has prepared you for all life's craziness and even equipped you with some amazing friends who will always have your back. You have heard it before: this place, these people are like no other, we are family. Don't worry about what comes next; just enjoy each day for what it is. I hope when you think about ENC and look back at this book filled with memories, a smile will fall upon your face. Enjoy life—it was fun doing college with you! Thank you, ENC Class of 2018.

SUPERLATIVES

In looking back at the 2017-2018 year at ENC, I am reminded of so many different experiences, as this year has been an up and down in many respects. We went from merging and transitioning with Trevecca back to being independent. We saw some sports teams do extremely well, but we also saw disappointments both as players and as fans. We adjusted to new structures in the Residential Life department, a system that many started the year sore over but grew to love as they embraced the new graduate assistant resident directors on campus. We have gone to many new exciting programs courtesy of SGA, our clubs, and our ministries, while simultaneously struggling with some difficult conversations in the Student Senate. We excelled one more year in the classroom as many of us worked hard to put our best academic foot forward in our coursework and at the Academic Symposium. We worked hard, but we also went to Breathe Retreat and took advantage of restful opportunities. Overall, we have done, seen, and endured an incredible amount in the last eight months. What I am most proud of as the junior class president is that I have been able to see the class of 2019 dwell in every one of these areas and more. Despite the small size of our class, we dug in, got the most out of this academic year in every aspect of our lives, and solidified our place as strong rising seniors. With that in mind, I prefer to think of our class not as small or sparse, but as dense and rich. If I had to summarize this past year in a few words, it would be that the junior class is tempered and sharp. I say: bring 2018-2019 on and watch us thrive.

Class of 2020

The class of 2020 came in being touted as one of the biggest classes ENC has seen in years. With a large class comes great expectations. The class of 2020 spent our freshman year learning what it's like to be college students and how to be student leaders. When given the opportunity, our class not only rose to the occasion, but exceeded expectations.

This year, we have seen numerous sophomores take on positions such as lead roles in our plays and musicals, captains on sports teams, Resident Assistants, chapel team members, and student government leaders. The class not only stepped up to support the school, but has also made strides to reach the outside community, as several sophomores have participated in the Sandwich Ministry and participated in the 30-Hour Famine in support of the International Justice Mission. We're halfway through our college experience and the work we have started this year will only continue to grow. I look forward to how God will use each member of our class in the years to come.

This year has been a year to remember, and a very big year for many of us freshman. A whole new journey began once we stepped foot on the campus for move-in day. Since that day, friendships have been created, relationships formed, majors declared, sports games and other events attended, essays written, and hours worked, all with many late nights and lack of sleep. Our sports teams have all had very exciting seasons, some of the best in years! Our SGA executives have created a positive environment and events for all to enjoy. Upperclassmen invested heavily in our campus experience and helped mentor us in the transition from day one. Professors and coaches have poured into our lives throughout the year. In addition, ENC has gone through many transitional changes this year, all in the best interest of the students. Dan Boone has served as an excellent vocal leader in that process and we will always remember and appreciate his presence on our campus. This year, students voiced their concerns and began to develop and utilize their voice by attending Student Senate meetings. I am excited about the passion that many individuals on this campus have, as it displays their true love and care for this campus and the student body. While this year has been awesome, it is time to turn the page as a whole new chapter begins next semester. I cannot wait to see what God has in store for this campus moving forward! I wish all of the graduates luck as they embark on a new adventure, and I welcome all the new faces to this wonderful community we call family.

Coming to the United States as an international student to play college tennis was a big step in my life, because I knew I had to leave my family and friends to follow my dream. I had many expectations before I came to ENC regarding my tennis goals and wishes because I am an ambitious person and a competitive tennis player. My brother, who is also playing college tennis at ENC, told me about his past season and how they almost won their conference. It impressed me, and I knew at this point that I wanted to be as successful with my team as the men's tennis team was last season.

When I met my coach and my teammates, I immediately felt comfortable and happy with them around me because they were so hospitable and funny. Even though my English was not as good as my teammates' English, they and my coach always knew what I wanted to say and what I meant. The workouts and practices we had to do were pretty hard, and sometimes I wanted to give up, but my team always encouraged and supported me to continue and succeed. I have never felt uncomfortable around them because they always tried to give me a great time since my first day here. Honestly, I could not have wished for a better team than I have.

My goal for my first season here at ENC was to be successful with my team, compete hard, and support my teammates. We practiced a lot, had fun every minute and, honestly, we did a great job. I am so happy to be part of a team which captured the first-ever playoff victory in the women's tennis team's history and I am looking forward to continuing playing tennis for ENC, being successful as a team, and having fun with my amazing teammates and my coach.

The 2017 soccer season posed many challenges and struggles. It was not an easy season, but in the midst of all of it there came many opportunities to learn and grow. I can't speak for my whole team, but I know that this soccer season has been an opportunity to learn and grow for myself.

This soccer season taught me how to learn from losing a game. Losing is terrible and no one wants to lose, but at the end of the day, a loss is not a complete failure. What I mean by that is that every loss we endured this season was a chance to learn and grow. I learned so much from every game this season and am now able to use that knowledge in the offseason and in the upcoming season.

Even more valuable than what I learned about being a better player on the field was what this past season taught me about life. All of the challenges and losses we faced as a team were daily reminders that things don't always go the way we want. Those hardships, however, are what should push us to keep working hard. I'm grateful to have experienced this season because my determination to work hard in all I do, even when the results aren't great, has grown. I wouldn't trade this season for anything if doing so meant giving up the lessons I learned.

Anson Thibault, First-Year

As a freshman, coming onto a new team at a new school was nerve-wracking. Meeting the new team and new coaching staff for the first time was invigorating. The loving family-like atmosphere that was created was very welcoming. A family where everyone can express themselves without the fear of being overlooked.

Arriving late to the preseason, I was worried I wouldn't be up to the challenge of a collegiate team. However, I was inspired by the examples of hard work and dedication of the upperclassmen. They refused to let the freshmen falter during our morning runs or afternoon sessions. When we were not working hard, the team was either eating together, having class together, or just chilling together.

With so many setbacks throughout the season, the team was forced to adapt and take on many challenges. Losing both of our goalies to torn ACL injuries, Michaela Connors and Key Bryant stepped up and filled in the much-needed role. Overcoming obstacles and hardships, we became a stronger team, filling in for one another and growing better.

The upperclassmen provided the experience necessary to keep our team motivated and engaged throughout a difficult season. The team showed resilience, perseverance, and fought like lions every game. I am proud to say that we left everything we had out on the pitch.

My short time on the ENC men's golf team has been incredible. I never thought my journey here would lead me to become part of a team for a sport I had never played competitively before. Just ten short months ago, I began taking lessons with Joe Griffin, a golf pro at my hometown country club. I had always been interested, but it was the opportunity to spend more time with my girlfriend's father by playing golf together that pushed me into pursuing it. Over these last two semesters being a part of the golf team, I have met some amazing teammates that will hopefully remain as lifelong friends.

After I contacted Coach Toni Kabilian over the summer, she has been constantly supporting me and motivating me to succeed. Upon arriving to ENC before the fall semester began, we played several rounds of golf together in order to prepare for the upcoming season. With two of the members being new to ENC, I was able to help them settle in as they helped me tremendously on the course. Jacob Waldroop, Michael Dietz, Coach Toni and I were all able to go on an incredible trip to Florida over spring break to play one of the most prestigious courses in the world: TPC Sawgrass. Being a part of the golf team has been an amazing experience which has really helped me grow as an individual, as well as an athlete. I owe it all to my teammates as well as Coach Kabilian for their support and for the opportunity I am truly grateful for.

Sam Danis, Junior

The ENC women's volleyball team, as cliché as it sounds, is a family. During pre-season, we spent almost all day with each other in a sweaty gym working on changing from strangers to teammates and friends. When I first met all the girls, it was about two days into pre-season and I had shown up late. My first practice was terrifying because I thought that my teammates would be angry that I missed the first two days and that I would be behind on all the drills.

While it took me a while to get the hang of practice, the girls welcomed me with open arms and really became my first friends in college. During our season, we had many tough losses and even tougher wins. We had fun van rides and we had long ones. We have laughed a lot and talked about life with each other. We have had Music Mondays and very busy Saturday Tournaments. We have supported each other in our studies and we have grown together in our spiritual walks with Christ. As a first-year, I became a part of this team and a part of this family. I had the unique experience of playing with my cousin Kayla, and have learned about the game and life from her. Kayla, along with the other seniors, gave advice to the underclassmen and helped me and others succeed while we are here. The graduating members of the women's volleyball team will be missed greatly.

Family—that's the best way to describe the ENC women's basketball team. The 2017-2018 team was a unique and diverse group of women. We had players from the West Coast, from Arizona, Ohio, Hawaii and everywhere else in-between. The unique dynamic that developed over the season created a group that fought through many adversities while also creating unforgettable memories with each other. This group of women learned to take care of each other and always put the team above everything else. Through hiking, a scavenger hunt in Boston, attending the Celtics open practice, and other team bonding, we grew into a family.

After working countless events at Gillette Stadium to raise money, we were able to travel to Puerto Rico over the Christmas break. We volunteered our time to help those in need after the hurricanes devastated the island. We also played a game against a Puerto Rican team and came out with a win. The memories that we made in Puerto Rico really made this year very special.

The four seniors, under the guidance of Coach Sacha and Coach Madison, helped lead and develop the culture that will leave the team ready for a great year next year.

Shelby Holmes, Senior

The best word that you could use to describe the 2018 ENC Men's Basketball team is growth. The group that walked into the gym on October 15th as a collection of individuals walked off the floor in February as a team. We developed our skills and we grew as a family all season long. Each guy learned so much from everything that Coaches Polsgrove, Sharp, and the Wagners had to offer. Additionally, our seniors Micah and TJ taught all of the underclassmen a lot about the game that we will certainly benefit from in the years to come.

Beating Gordon in the Lion's Den on senior night this season was something that none of us will soon forget. The atmosphere in the gym was better than it had been in a whole year, and each guy enjoyed the down-to-the-wire contest as much as the one standing next to him. The Gordon victory was one of nine for the Lions this year, which also included wins over the Wentworth Institute of Technology, the University of New England, and Curry College in conference.

Moving conferences next year is something that we are excited for as we prepare to return next fall. We are bringing back most of our roster from last year, and are looking forward to the arrival of recruits from all over the country. Our goal is to be playing basketball in March next year. Our team is committed to improving with the off-season and we are very excited to introduce Lions Basketball to the New England Collegiate Conference next year!

The second season of men's volleyball was different from the first season in many ways, with only a few similarities with our inaugural season. For one thing, about half of our team was new to volleyball this year, all of them coming to the team from a different sport. So, just like last year, much of the fall's nontraditional season was spent learning the four basics of volleyball: passing, serving, hitting, and blocking. Our team came into this season with expectations of what it meant to be a collegiate athlete, when last year a lot of us didn't know what to expect. When preseason rolled around, I noticed something different from last year. Instead of giving us money and leaving us to eat by ourselves or with a few other teammates, our coach scheduled several meals at various homes where we ate and enjoyed fellowship as a team. Last year, the team was just a bunch of friends who joined the volleyball team. This year, the new members joined the team and almost instantly became a part of the team, not just outsiders, without skipping a beat.

We bonded well because we spent so much time together outside of volleyball. We watched movies, played Mario Baseball, developed inside jokes, and had many more fun times together. On top of that we were fairly successful as a team; we made it to the conference semifinals. All season long, even against the elite teams we faced, there were stretches of play in the matches where we held our own.

One thing in particular made this year different than last year. After our season ending loss to Elms and the end of the speeches in the locker room, we all raised our arms for one last call. Normally someone would say, "Lions on 3... 1, 2, 3 Lions!" But for this last one, Kenny led the call and replaced "Lions" with "family." And that is what made this team so special. For all of our unique differences, the 2018 ENC Men's Volleyball team was truly one family.

To be part of the Track and Field team is something that I see as a blessing, especially here at ENC. As a first-year in college, I wouldn't have imagined joining a team that would welcome me with such open arms, especially during my first season on the team. I would not even have thought about being so close with my teammates and coaches.

Throughout this season, I have been challenged physically but, most importantly, mentally. I don't see Track as a sport that just anyone can compete in. Your mind needs to be focused on being the best version of you that there is. This way, you can be the best at competing and serve God above all. We all bring different things forward in our events and to each other, which definitely makes us a family. "Come hungry," as Coach Christina says. And coming hungry to our meets is exactly what I do. I see our coaches as more than just people who hold the title "Coach." They are like older siblings that help us on and off the track. Being able to set personal records two meets in a row with such a short season says a lot, and for that I will always be thankful for having Coach Brian "B-Law" and Coach Christina. I have never felt such an ambition to do better until this season started. I look forward to the track career that lies ahead for me at ENC.

Our season had many ups and downs, but even when we were down, we stood together. At the end of the day, we're a team and a family that always has each other's backs. Although I am a first-year, I saw the bond that they had with each other and I just joined right in—no problem. I have learned that no matter where you are and what you have been through, these guys will always be there for you, even if it is not baseball-related. We are all hard workers and want to make the best of every game we play. We go out on that diamond everyday to compete and represent ENC.

Osbourne Traill, First-Year

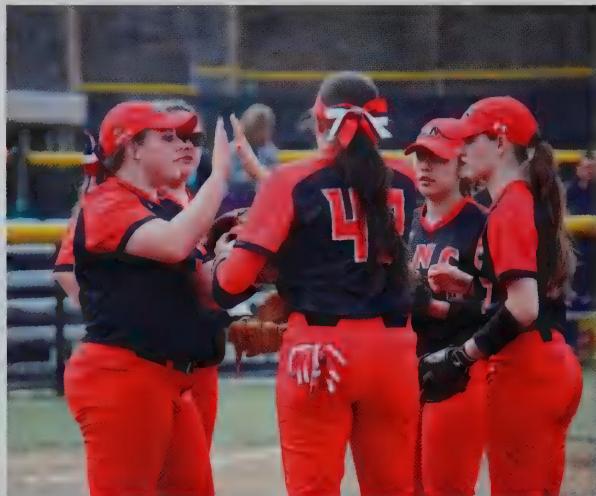

Softball at Eastern Nazarene has been an incredible experience so far. Not only have I had the opportunity to play the sport I love, but I've made memories and built relationships that will stay with me long after I graduate from ENC. Playing a sport is a huge time commitment and can be draining both physically and emotionally, but rising to the occasion is exciting and every challenge we've faced up to this point has been rewarding.

I thought I knew a good deal coming into college—about life, the game, etc.—but since arriving at ENC, I've realized that there is still so much to learn. It's been such a privilege to utilize the wisdom of my coaches, Dani Bishop and Janelle Bouchard, train with upperclassmen, and work together with all my teammates to be the best that we can be. The fusion of girls with such diverse personalities, backgrounds, and skill sets can be crazy at times but I believe it's an asset that's both entertaining and makes us that much stronger.

I would encourage all ENC students, athlete or not, to get involved in some capacity on this campus. Make it your own! There really is something for everyone—you need only be brave and put yourself out there. Representing this school and being a part of something greater than yourself is so much fun and something I hope each of us, at some point or another, can experience.

My second year at ENC, my second year on the tennis team, and the team's second CCC Championship Final. Again, we made it to the final of the Commonwealth Coast Conference playoffs. After the tough loss in the final against Nichols last year, there is only one goal that the team is aiming for this year: defeat Nichols and bring the trophy to ENC.

Being part of the tennis team is an amazing experience for every player. I deeply enjoy being a member of the team. This year, the team consisted of nine fantastic guys. The team, led by Head Coach Cris Popa and Assistant Coach Jack Sahlman, has a great team spirit. As soon as we step on the court, whether for practice or matches, the team is able to create marvelous moments. We are not only good tennis players, we are fantastic characters, which contributes significantly to our achievements on the tennis court.

The team is very diverse, with players from Russia, Venezuela, Germany, and (of course) the United States. Having people from everywhere on the team helps each of us get a better and broader understanding of different opinions and views. Not only on the court, but off the court, we are a very close group. Coach Popa is much more for us than just a coach. He helps us a lot and listens to our problems.

Although we lost three fantastic seniors last year, the team kept growing together more and more. My fellow German, first-year Julius Opaschowski enriches the team as a person and as a tennis player. He did not lose one singles match this season.

As with my first year, our spring break and pre-season trip to Hilton Head in South Carolina was my personal highlight. Playing against teams from across the nation, finding new friends from Brazil, Canada, or Spain, and enjoying the beauty of the island was all spectacular.

All in all, I feel honored and am proud to be part of the "Dawgs." I am thankful for the last two years, and I am looking forward to the next two. Thank you to the team, and an even bigger thank you to our coaches for giving me such great moments and for taking me how I am.

While being interviewed for the position of Editor for the Nautilus I was asked what I thought a yearbook meant to people and what makes them important to people. In all honesty, I don't even remember what my response was. What I do know is that I learned very quickly the real answer to those questions.

A yearbook is so much more than just a collection of pictures, a record of what events happened when, and who played what sport. Yearbooks are a series of memories. They are an avenue in which people can look back and remember the good times, the bad times, and everything in between. They can provide a time of reflection, and even connection if you so chose to share these memories with those who were not able to experience them with you.

I would be lying if I said creating a whole book from scratch wasn't hard. It is. It also takes time, care, and a lot of attention to detail. Through all of that, though, we have done the best that we can to provide you with the avenue to remember your times at ENC.

There are many people that without, this book wouldn't have seen the light of day. Chris Estep was the one who believed in me from the beginning, encouraging me that this was a job I could (or rather, should) do, and that I was capable of doing it well. Joey Fortin and Kenzie Blake worked well under pressure, and they did incredible work to ensure that this book is what it is. When I was frustrated, tired, and felt like I had nothing left, my roommates, Adele Duval and Becky Hay, were the ones who picked me back up, brushed me off, and pushed me forward.

At the end of the day, I feel honored to be a part of this organization, and I'm touched by how much people care about this school and the time they spend here.

I hope that to all who see this, the Nautilus has been a way for you to look back at your time at ENC and return home, even if only for a moment.
